Chicago are now striking for better pay? How is it that the tariff does not protect them from the car-loads of substitutes, many of them, no doubt, recent immigrants, which the great monopoly that owns the Chicago street railways is now hurrying across the country to "kill the strike ?" And how is it that labor everywhere and in all occupations finds organization and mutual help its best and only protection?

BENSIBLE PRIZES.

A sensible matron has offered as prizes at the Cold Spring (L. I.) fair five silver medals to girls not over seventeen years old for "the best raised biscuits, the best tea biscuits, the best apple pie, the best bread and the best butter."

This is the right kind of competition to encourage. A "beauty show" stimulates vanity and begets impertinent curiosity. Besides, beauty is something that girls do not themselves achieve. They are born to be beautiful, and the "fatal gift" is no especial credit to them. It is likewise "only skin deep," and is a passing show.

But good cookery is an art. It is one of the bases of good health, of good temper, of home happiness and even of beauty.

Every girl should know how to cook

THE ROLL OF MERIT.

THE EVENING WORLD'S "Roll of Merit," containing the names of the scholars in the primary schools who have received the highest marks during the week for punctuality, deportment and excellence in studies, has proved of great help to the schools and of much interest to parents and pupils.

If the publication stimulated the little folks to their harm we should not make it. But punctuality and good behavior are virtues to which all may aspire without injury and with excellent results. They are funda mental in the formation of correct habits of life, and their attainment contributes much to success in any career.

Excellence in recitations is likewise to be determined not to print any Warner Miller tickets.
Philip J. Scannel, a leader in the Fourth Assembly District organization of the United Labor party, announced his determination to support Gov. Hill as the best friend of organized labor. encouraged, especially as the school life of a large majority of the pupils must be brief, and they should make the most of it.

The Tammany local ticket is made up of honest and capable men. HUGH GRANT has been tried in public office and not found wanting. Senator REILLY is especially popular with the workingmen, whose cause he so successfully championed at Albany. Now it is the "County's" play, and after them the Republicans will take their turn. The people of New York are to have a wide choice in their local officers.

Col. FRANK BURE did not find the working. men frightened by the tariff scare in his tour through the State. He says they naturally argue that if their employers resist tariff reform as tending to lower wages, there must be an African in the wood-pile, as they reduce wages whenever they can.

Nine million dollars for land for new parks seems a good round sum, but if they are so located and constructed as to be health and pleasure grounds for the mass of people, instead of mere show places for the rich, the money will be well expended.

MATT. QUAY will use none of the Republican campaign funds to buy medicine to cure Mr. BLAINE's loss of voice. The cold is better than a muzzle, because folly may slip through the latter.

About the siltiest campaign argument is a bet. It proves nothing except a foot's will ingness to part with his money.

A Once Pleasant and Profitable Industry Reduced to a Grind.

There is still another branch of the sweating system carried on in this big city to an alarming extent, and it is grinding and sapping the life-blood out of thousands of young girls and young women and a good many older ones.

It is carried on in the manufacture of fancy feathers and artificial flowers in the shops and at the tenement-house homes of myriads of poor tollers who work like slaves to earn paltry pittances, some finding it not enough to keep body and soul together, and others adding it as a mite to the support of families or dependent ones.

The fancy feather industry used to be prosperous one for the workers, but grasping money-sweaters who control the trade and a falling off in the demand because of the freaks of fashion have caused a great reducfreaks of fashion have caused a great reduc-tion in wages, until at the present time they are down to a very low average—not more than $5 for sixty or seventy hours' work in a week; and now the manager of the leading concern in the business has ordered and is enforcing a reduction of from 15 to 25 per cent, in all its departments, which will bring the average wages down to $3.75 a

This sweeping reduction in the wages of This sweeping reduction in the wages of workers who have spent years at the trade, until they have become experts, and who, a few years ago earned and received good wages, naturally caused astonishment and indignation among several hundreds of employees, many of whom went out on strike, while the others would have gone but for the fear of starvation and dire impoverishment, which would fall not alone upon themselves but upon those dependent on them for sup-one young woman, with the tears welling up in her eves, said that she had an aged mother dependent on her, and it was only by practising the most rigid economy and abstemicusness that they were enabled to buy the very plainest of food and pay rent for two little rooms in a downtown tenement.

At the reduction of 25 per cent, declared in the department where this young woman is employed, she said, poyerty stared her and employed, she said, poyerty stared her and

There is the sweater element again. General depression in trade of all kinds is given as the cause for this concern's action, and not the falling off in the fashion of wear-ing fancy flowers. Better times are hoped for, says the manager of the establishment.

The cause of the poor girls and women who have thus been subjected to a reduction

Miss Minnie Dupree, the Susan of the "Held by the Enemy" company, now play-ing through Indiana and Illinois, is going to 'jump" away from that company at Leavenworth in time to reach New York and play the part in the big production of the play at Wallack's Theatre.

Matt Snyder says he has decided not play in "Mr. Barnes of New York," although he gives no reason for his withdrawal from that production.

It is said that Augustin Daly's tour next rear will cover Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and, po-sibly, San Francisco. At any rate, it seems to be settled that he will not make a European tour.

David Belasco has been quietly working with Phil Goatcher, the scenic artist, on the models for the production of 'Under the Polar Star,' which is to be given in this city during the season. Belasco for the last two or three years, has been confining him-self to plays in which the society element was predominant. He says it seems funny to him to make his characters move among ice bergs and "sich-like," instead of among bergs and "sich-like," instead plush chairs and silken hangings.

An Anti-Water Man.

I am glad to see that Dr. Crosby, with your approval, thinks people may drink beer on Sunday. I would like space to demonstrate that water drinking does more demonstrate that water drinking does more harm than beer drinking. Water in thickly populated countries is impure and defiled from many sources. All running streams carry with them filth from slauchter-houses, farm-yards, pig-pens and privies. They are open sewers. In settled communities there is hardly a well that is not supplied under ground from house drains and cesspools: hardly one properly ventilated, and, yeu may say, none at all properly cleaned. These streams and wells give the supply of drinking water for the great bulk of water drinkers. They are also the source of microbes, bacilli, malarial germs and gases, either directly from the water of from ground saturated with such water. These germs are saturated with such water. These germs are the recognized source of almost every dis-ease of every character, ruining the health of the people and undermining the constituons of coming generations. Some deceive themselves with the notion that running water and the agitation of the wind frees the water from these impurities. Try it by tasting the ice that comes from rivers—ice, which is the best product of water. All our ing the ice that comes from rivers—ice, which is the best product of water. All our rivers—the Hudson, Passac, Schuylkil, Lake George, Saratoga Lake and every other lake take the sewage of all the towns bordering on them. It is the established and general system of American drainage to turn all sewage into lakes and streams. The people's rotest expant this is the increasing. eral system of American drainage to turn all sewage into lakes and streams. The people's protest against this is the increasing use of bottled spring and filtered waters. This causes the use of water in the shape of beer, and water corrected by whiskey. Thousands wisely and wholly refrain from the use of na ural water, and there is probably no town in the country where the patural water would in the country where the natural water would stand the usual tests of purity. The best temperance movement would be a crusade against the poliution of lakes and streams and for the examina ion and purification of wells.

Reeper Fogarty, at the Morgue, Does No Believe She Belonged in the City-She Was Comely, with Soft Brown Hair, a Graceful Figure and a "tory That Will Probably Be Buried with Her.

About one hundred people have called a the Morgue during the past two days to look at the body of the unknown woman who swallowed a dose of poison and died in the Compton House Wednesday night. A few of the visitors were anxiously searching for missing wives, sisters, daughters or sweethearts, but the majority were prompted to go there merely by a spirit of morbid curiosity. Joe Fogarty, the custodion of the friendless dead, can tell one of the atter class at a glauce, and it is seldom that their longing is gratified. The woman in question registered at the hotel as Mrs. Brown. It may be her right name, as the initials K. C. B. were engraved on a turquoise ring, the only article of jew elry she wore. Unless the body be recognized by next Tuesday, it will be sent to the Potter's field

An Evening World reporter visited the Morgne this morning. Following Fogarty he entered the dismal dead-house and passed between long rows of pine boxes. The mournful music of the rain pattering down on the tinned root seemed in perfect harmony with the general aspect of the place. A side door looking out on the East River admitted more fog than light, and the keeper was obliged to light a lantern before the woman's features could be made out in the rough coffin that contains her remains.

woman's features could be made out in the rough coffin that contains her remains.

She was evidently a handsome woman, inthe prime of life. Her face was rather long, but perfectly proportioned, and the figure was graceful. The flesh, except on the face and hands, was as smooth and soft as velvet. She had all the outward appearance of a woman in a middle station in life. Her hair was long, soft, and light brown in color. Her eyes were blue.

There is no mark or blemish on the body by which it could be identified. The ciothing was of good quality and showed that the woman was a person of refinement. The dress was of heavy black silk, with side plaits of black jet. The waist was made of the same material. The shoes, stockings and underclothing were of the best material. A heavy jacket of blue diagonal cloth was lined with rich white striped satin.

Her bonnet was of brown straw and of the style known as "The Goddess of Liberty."

Fogarty, whose fifteen years' experience in handling such cases gives his opinion great weight, said to the reporter:

"This is a very mysterious case. The woman, I am confident, was a respectable married woman. I do not believe she lived in this city. She probably lived in some adjacent country place, and after leaving her home for some cause came to this city. Here, brooding over her trouble, alone and friendless in this big city, she became melancholy and ended her existence. I hope that she will be identified before I am obliged to send her to Potter's Field."

Marriage Is a Lottery.

To the Editor of The Eccating World:

The whole system of marriage is simply a lottery of the worse, at best description. There are no two persons in this world who can legitimately say they will be suited to each other after marriage, however much they like each other before.

It is a well-nigh proven fact that the war-

UPTOWN. Solomons Without Wisdom

My experience in managing a husband has been such that I firmly believe that all men are Solomons, without the wisdom of that impure " wise man " to guide them. From my observations of married people—"the true inwardness" of whose domestic life would not benefit the coming generations to know in full—marriage is made something more of a failure by the faults of the husband than by the general failings or deficiencies of the wife. One man wholly and chastely for one wife will make married life a success and never a failure. M. E. W.

A Young Lady's Say. To the Editor of The Evening World: I suppose a young lady may have her say about marriage being a failure or a success. Although a husband's and a wife's ideas may not at first harmonize on all subjects, yet if they are patient with each other they will after a time be able to anticipate each other's wants and to harmonize in all things, and if both would strive to see what they could do for each other's happiness, then there would be no reason to say that mar-is a failure, but truly a success. We believe that Tammany has not understood ts mission in this critical moment. We believe that Tammany should have elevated itself to a higher position and not have given us a machine ticket, for we cannot consider this ticket otherwise than as a machine ticket. Tammany has just done what Mayor Hewitt wanted it to do and th objections against machine city government vill influence many of the citizens who do not like Mr. Hewitt on account of his proclivities. The great of the Germans undoubtedly would have voted for an independent Democrat if Tammany would have given us such a one, but we could very much whether Mr. Grant will be accepted as a man who can be trusted completely. He is personally very popular among the Germans, but the distrust of Tammany is also very great among them, and it may be that this will decide the choice of a great many Germans in favor of Mr. Hewitt. but from Col. Urquhart, Mrs Potter's father, who is stopping at the Brevoort, the reporter learned that the music was left in a hansom cab which Mrs. Potter had taken from Wallack's Theatre, where she had been rehearing, to the hotel.

The music was that used in the play of "Mile. De Bressier."

Mrs. Potter maugurated her second season last night in Newburg. She appeared as Princess Elizabeth in Tom Taylor's "'Twixt Axe and Crown." She started for New York immediately after the performance, hoping to see her mother, who sailed for Havre on the Gascogne this morning.

The vessel sailed at 6 o'clock and Mrs.
Potter arrived at 7.30—an hour and a half too late.

17'S NOW A UNION OFFICE. A Radical Change in "The Mail and Express" Composing-Room. For the past four or five years the office of the Mail and Express has been what union printers term a "rat" concern. That is, men have been employed in setting the type for the paper who are not and would not be union printers, though the opportunity has been given them to become such.

To-day a radical change was made by the management, and a force of fifty-two commanagement, and a force of fity-two compositors, all members of Typographical Union No. 6. has been taken in. All the non-union hands, to whom an extended notice had been given, were discharged.
Editor Shepard is absent from the city, but one of his assistants said the change was made for business reasons, that the management had long contemplated it, and that the limited room for the work rendered it necessary to employ a force of picked hands.

He denied that there were any political
